Crime Tsunami Swamps SE3

.... and the rest of England and Wales! The growth of cyber-crime over the past few years has grown relentlessly. And it's getting worse!

It's official! Online fraud is now the most common crime in the country with almost one in ten people falling victim every year.

The figures were revealed for the first time in the annual Crime Survey of England and Wales which assesses the total number of offences by interviewing people about their personal experience of crime. This is thought to give a more realistic overall picture of the incidence of crime much of which goes unreported to the police or other authorities.

While traditional crimes such as burglary and car theft continue to fall, almost ten per cent of the adult population reports having been a victim of some form of cyber crime.

More than five and a half million cyber offences are now thought to take place each year accounting for almost half of all crime.

According to the survey the total number of all offences in the 12 months to September 2016 topped 11.8 million, of which 3.6 million were fraud and further 2 million were related to computer misuse.

To put these figures in perspective - the next most common offences were theft (3.5 million cases), violence against the person (1.3 million) and criminal damage (1.2 million).

Nearly half of all cyber-crimes are bank account frauds, a quarter involve "Ponzi" type schemes, "pension liberation" offers and investments in dodgy commodities, and another quarter are computer virus attacks damaging the computer or leading to "ransomware" demands.

There are countless other criminal stratagems out there - far too many to outline here.

I am fairly sure that nearly everyone with a PC or smart phone who reads this will have had recent experience of some variant or other of cyber-crime.

After a spike in the number of recorded crimes last Autumn the number in the 30 weeks from December to the end of June (22 of them) is back down to the Cator Estate's more "normal" levels for recent years. Burglary, actual and attempted, remains a persistent menace with several instances of doors and windows being violently forced.

Keep doing all the sensible things – lock up securely, use your burglar alarms, keep some lights on (inside and out), don't keep items you value in your vehicle, hide your keys. Stay vigilant.

Sadly, rough sleepers are encountered on the Cator Estate from time to time.

Anyone can become homeless. The longer someone sleeps rough the greater the risk that they will become trapped on the streets – vulnerable to criminals and to developing or exacerbating drug, alcohol or other health problems. Not all rough sleepers are aware that advice and support is available to them.

The Government, in partnership with homeless charities, has set up Street Link to provide us with a means to act when we see someone sleeping rough. It is the first step to ensuring that rough sleepers are connected to local services and the support available to them.

If you are concerned about a rough sleeper contact Street Link by telephone or through their web site. The details you provide will be sent to the local authority so they can help connect the person to the appropriate services and support available to them.

Street Link will follow up with the local authority within ten days and, if you so request, will provide you with a progress report.
